Career Goals and Objectives

During this master's of learning technologies program, I have learned how to leverage online technologies to educate learners best. My exposure to various learning theories, such as constructionism, has expanded my definition of what a successful learning outcome is.   My future career goals are as follows:

1. Working with various stakeholders to determine an organization's learning needs
2. Helping to create and manage multiple learning platforms and tools.
3. Developing new tools that will further the instructional design field as a whole.